Flipkart seller support contact

By Kay Ireland you have to contact Zynga Customer Support for any problems you are experiencing related to Farm. Zynga is a gaming giant behind Facebook games like FarmVille, Mafia Wars, CafeWorld and others. Whether you need help completing a task or your app is locked, Zynga's customer support will help you navigate the problem and get playing again. Zynga only provides online support and email for non-billing issues. If you are having a billing issue, call (800)762-2530. Open the web browser and go to Zynga's support area (resource link). Read the list of common support questions and their answers below the most important issues and answers for FarmVille in red on the left side of the web page to see if your question has already been answered. If you don't see your question, type your question in the search bar below or look for your answers by searching green on the left side of the page. A list of answered questions that are closely related to your question appears. Click our email below to get answers in green if your question doesn't appear in the search results list. Click on the appropriate drop-down lists and fields to enter more information about your question to help convert your information into the appropriate support group. You also have the option to download a screenshot of JPG from your problem. Enter your email address or Zynga account information and check your email or Zynga account for an answer within 48 hours. Although you may not be able to connect directly to Gmail support without signing up for G Suite for businesses, there are two ways to get the answers you're looking for online. Let's look at how to get help with Gmail issues. Using Gmail's help for public support topics, the first resource we'll look for is Gmail Help, a Gmail support page loaded with solutions for most common issues. Once you've reached the Gmail Support homepage, you can scroll through some of the most frequent help topics that Gmail users face. Clicking on any topic reveals a list of articles to help you explore and fix your problems. When you click any of the articles, you are redirected to a page with step-by-step instructions on how best to resolve this issue. The page also includes Android and iOS steps as well. If you don't find a topic that answers your question, there's a search box at the top of the page that you can use to describe the problem you're experiencing. If you're having a more specific and less common problem, you'll need to turn to the Gmail Help forum to get the help you need. Using the Gmail Help Forum for specific topics, the next option is to go to the forums, where people go to ask specific questions about problems with Gmail accounts. The forum is posted with other Gmail users, as well as Google employees. You can access the forum from the Gmail Help page (click the help forum link in the top left corner), or by going Gmail Help Forum page directly. Once you access the forums, scrolling down the latest questions posed by the community appears. Like Google Help, at the top of the page, you can use the search bar to identify any related questions that the user may have already asked. As with most forums, it is a good format to try to find your problem to see if a solution has already been posted. After that, if you don't find a solution to your problem, you can create a new topic. This requires you to sign in to your Google Account and post a question on the community. This allows any other user to respond to a related solution, and if you're lucky, a Google volunteer might help you even more. To do this, click the new theme button. On the next page, in the box provided, explain the problem you're experiencing, along with any photos, links, or attachments that might help other community members help you solve your problem. Once you've entered all the details, click the Publish button. If neither of these two types of resources comes close to solving your initial problems, you can always send a letter to Google. Their site lists the address of every Google headquarters in the world. They're definitely going to respond to a real message, right? Most of the time, buying eBay is a fairly self-contained thing, either put a try or buy now. You are then paid with PayPal, and after a short wait your item is delivered. Sometimes, however, you need to follow up with your seller after the sale has occurred. The four most common reasons for this need are: you wait longer than you expect for your item and need to track your shipmentNeed to ask a question about your item seller either before or after deliveryneeds to arrange a return item for a refund or exchangewant to buy more from the same seller if you are less familiar with eBay purchases, these tasks can seem a bit daunting. Whichever of these tasks I was sitting on to accomplish, they all start the same way, with a visit to my eBay area. To visit eBay to implement these steps, click my eBay at the top right of your browser and select the purchase date from the pop-up menu that appears if you're on a mobile device using the eBay mobile app, click my eBay control (you may have to search for it a little bit, but it exists). In my eBay's purchase list, you'll see tracking information for every recent purchase you've made — along with an estimated delivery date — just under each listing address. In most cases, you can track your package simply by clicking on the tracking number displayed. If the tracking information is displayed, either your seller has not shipped the item yet, or (equally likely) they shipped the item out of the eBay card printing system and did not enter the tracking number manually. You'll need to follow up with them for shipment and tracking details. To contact the seller to ask A question about a particular item, follow the following steps: Hover over the more action statement to the right of any purchase in your list Choose the contact vendor from the pop-up menu that appears to ask you to specify a reason for the question. For general questions, select the first item, I have a question about using my item or I want to send a message to the seller. Then click Continue to show a space to enter your message. Enter your message, then click Send to send it to the seller, who can reply to you. To start returning an item that has already been delivered, follow the following steps: Select the Return button to the right of any purchase in the list. On the next page, you'll be asked to specify a reason for your return, and will be given space to add details about why you're returning, as well as a photo. If possible, enter a sentence or two in detail your own problem with the item and the required resolution (I want a refund! or i would like to exchange that item, for example), then provide a picture of the item problem, if the problem is visible. These steps will help you make a justified case in case the seller refuses or withdraws his feet. Once you enter the relevant information, click a return request to notify eBay and the seller that return is required. You'll receive instructions on completing your return via email. Note that this step should not be taken lightly: When shoppers ask to return, the eBay defect rate increases - this can affect their ability to sell on eBay in the future. On a happier note, sometimes you just want to buy more of what the seller has to offer, but don't want to go through the main search tool on eBay (which can return thousands of results) to track the seller himself back. To go directly to the seller's current listings, follow the following steps: Hover over the more action statement to the right of any purchase in your list choose to view the other items of the seller from the pop-up menu that appears after doing so, you'll see everything else the seller currently sells, and he'll be able to buy from it easily again.
